TERMITES AT SPICELAND

White Ants Honeycomb Wood in Coal House and Barn.

White ants, or termites, have made their appearance in Spiceland. The coal house at the Henry county bank has become infested with the insects, the sills being literally honeycombed by them. A barn belonging to C. W. Hudelson, on an adjoining lot, is also overrun with the pests. Kerosene and gasoline are being used to exterminate them. It is not yet known whether these means will be effective.

GO BEFORE STATE TAX BOARD TODAY

County Officials Journey to Indianapolis to Show Why 10 Per Cent Increase Shouldn't be Made.

ORDERED BY THE STATE BOARD

Rush county officials expected to appear before the State tax board in the State house in Indianapolis today to show reasons why the appraisement of property in Rush county this year should not be increased ten per cent over that of last year. County Commissioners Merrill Ball and Thomas Humes, Jesse Stone, county auditor, and John F. Moses, county assessor, went to Indianapolis for the hearing.

It is expected that the State board will make the increase as they ordered it when the assessment was first started. The Rush county assessors saw fit, however, to agree that the increase over the appraisement of last year should be only five per cent and the county board of review has found that it averages only four per cent all over the county, even after the appraisement of the property in Walker township was increased by that body three per cent. The increase will be made by the State board if done. The matter is now out of the hands of the local officials.

REPORT ONE NEW CASE OF SMALL POX

Chester, Son of Mr. and Mrs. James Barnes, Living 7 Miles South of City, Has Disease.

NO DANGER OF AN EPIDEMIC

Only one new case of smallpox has been reported to county health officer, Dr. Frank Green, that being Chester Barnes, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Barnes, living on the Bert Norris farm, seven miles south of the city. Barnes developed the disease Saturday and the home was immediately quarantined and the family vaccinated. This is the eighth case reported and all are recovering rapidly as the disease is in a very mild form.

As a precaution to the people living near where smallpox is, the physicians urge that if they become ill or break out with a rash, to summons a doctor at once and not attempt to go out, for if it should be smallpox it might be a means of spreading it. Local physicians believe there is no immediate danger of an epidemic and there is no reason to be alarmed.

MEETINGS GIVEN GOOD IMPETUS

Five People Are Joined to Churches in First of Evangelistic Union Services.

TWO OF THEM ARE CONVERTS

Meetings Planned as Outgrowth of Recent Revival Get Auspicious Start—Jamieson Preaches.

Two persons converted and three entering the church by letter is the result of the first of the series of Sunday evening evangelistic union meetings which was held at the St. Paul M. E. church last evening. The Sunday evening services, all of which will be on an evangelistic nature as an outgrowth of the recent revival here, will be held until the first of September in the various churches of the city. As soon as the tabernacle is erected in the city park, the services will be held there with the exception of the two Sunday evenings that the chautauqua is in progress.

The annual Rush county fair and the annual Rush county teachers' institute will be counter attractions this year as they both are booked to take place the week of August 21st, but arrangements have been made so that it will not be necessary for the pedagogues to miss the annual exhibition entirely. The morning program of the institute on Thursday and Friday will be started earlier than usual and none will be held in the afternoon so that teachers may attend the fair. It was intended that the dates of the two events should not conflict when the institute was planned for a week before the usual fair week. This year, however, the dates for the fairs in this circuit were moved up a week and it is for this reason that the two will take place at the same time.

The names of five persons were added to the church rolls last evening near the close of the meeting. When the first invitation was extended, no one responded, but in a few minutes three aged people walked forward and extended their church letters for admission to the St. Paul M. E. church. Shortly after that a mother and father, each carrying a child, went forward and confessed. They signified the Main Street Christian church as their preference.

The sermon last night was preached by the Rev. A. W. Jamieson of the United Presbyterian church on the subject, "The Wise and Foolish Virgins," and it was a wonderful exposition of the parable of the Bible of the Bible that the minister made.

The Rev. Mr. Jamieson at the beginning stated that the parables of the Bible are matchless. He declared that many have tried to use parables in writing, but they had always made a miserable failure and that those of the Bible were the only successful ones known to literature. He stated that the parables were so significant, as for instance, that of the prodigal son. The pastor said that many a man who had been saved thumbed his Bible at that point and read over and over that passage as it meant salvation to him.

"We invite your attention to the parable of the virgins," continued the Rev. Mr. Jamieson, "the five wise virgins and the five foolish virgins. There are three thoughts involved in that passage: First, the preparation of the wise; second, the lack of preparation by the foolish, and third, the consequences."

The Rev. Mr. Jamieson rehearsed the Bible tale in his own language, pointing out that olive oil was burned in the lamps by the virgins. He showed that all through the Bible oil is used to signify the blood of Jesus. He stated that the wise virgins took an extra supply of oil and when the ceremony at the wedding where the virgins went to attend, was started, the wise virgins were admitted and the foolish were barred for they had no oil to burn in their lamps. So, the pastor declared, the spiritual self must have Jesus for fuel else it can not exist.

The minister said that the foolish virgins were outside the ceremony room because they had no oil when the bridegroom came. He said it meant that no man can be of God unless he is born of Him. He said that the foolish virgins waited until mid-

Miss Louise Deitz to Give Some Practical Illustrations—Dr. Van Ormer is Returned.

The annual Rush county fair and the annual Rush county teachers' institute will be counter attractions this year as they both are booked to take place the week of August 21st, but arrangements have been made so that it will not be necessary for the pedagogues to miss the annual exhibition entirely. The morning program of the institute on Thursday and Friday will be started earlier than usual and none will be held in the afternoon so that teachers may attend the fair. It was intended that the dates of the two events should not conflict when the institute was planned for a week before the usual fair week. This year, however, the dates for the fairs in this circuit were moved up a week and it is for this reason that the two will take place at the same time.

The institute this year promises to exceed that of previous years in interest and instruction. Dr. A. B. Bunn Van Ormer will be returned this year as a special instructor. He appeared here for the first time last year and made a favorable impression. Miss Louise Deitz of Madison, Ind., will be the other instructor.

Prof. Van Ormer is from Shippensburg, Pennsylvania and acts as extension lecturer on Education in Pennsylvania College at Gettysburg, Pa., during the winter months. He is recognized as one of the best educators in the country and his appearance here is looked forward to with great anticipation by the teachers of the county. He needs no introduction on account of his unprecedented success here at the last institute. His family will accompany him on his vacation work this year and will be here during the week of the institute.

Prof. Van Ormer will have three topics to discuss at the coming institute. "The Problem of Moral Nurture" will be one of them. He will point out how a child's moral character may be good or bad, will discuss the potency for good or evil of the moving picture, will refer to the fine art of making a child bad and will show how the labor necessary in solving the problem should be divided. "The Doctrine of Instincts and its Pedagogical Applications" will be discussed in a lecture by Prof. Van Ormer. He will make specific studies for illustration of the following instincts: sex, curiosity, imitation,

MUST CUT WEEDS NOW

State Law Concerning Evil Will be Enforced Vigorously.

As reported recently some owners of vacant lots have already removed the weeds from their premises to the great relief of the surrounding residents. Those who have not, will be compelled to do so by the authorities, the State board of health having written to health officers of all the cities and towns. Country highways are not exempt and when a farmer refuses to remove the growth the work can be done by the road supervisor and the costs taxed against the property and collected the same as taxes.

INVENTS NEW SPEED GEAR

J. E. Hinchman Takes Out Patent on Device.

J. E. Hinchman of this city has patented a speed changing gear which promises to be a great success. Mr. Hinchman has received notice from the patent office in Washington that the patent is pending and he will probably receive the official papers in a few days. The new gear is the result of four years' work on the part of Mr. Hinchman. He claims that it can be used on an automobile to good advantage. The new gear is so arranged that the speed can be changed without stopping or even slowing down. He has already turned down a good offer from an automobile manufacturer.

ORDERS WILL ACT THIS WEEK

Suggested That Innovation Would Promote Social Feeling at Annual Assembly.

An innovation for the coming Rush county chautauqua which will be held in the city park August 6 to 13, is being urged which will in all probability assume definite shape this week. It is planned for all of the fraternal orders in the city to have special tents in the enclosure which may be used as a rest room for members of the orders and their wives during the assembly.

BOILER EXPLOSION NARROWLY AVOIDED

Rivets Break and Steam Escapes Before Damage is Done and Lives Are Lost.

WATER POURED IN HOT BOILER

A disaster which might have resulted in the loss of several lives and the destruction of a great amount of property was narrowly averted Saturday when the rivets in the boiler of a traction engine on the John McCann farm near Moscow were blown loose and an explosion which would have occurred was headed off. The engine had been used for operating a threshing machine. The boiler was allowed to get dry and all the water was used up before the machinist put more water in. An explosion would have resulted had the rivets not been weak and broke. They allowed the steam to escape and not much damage was done.

AUDIENCE HEARS THE UNEXPECTED

Little Things Discussed by the Rev. John B. Meacham Sunday Morning Were Not Children.

INFERRED THAT TO BE TOPIC

The Rev. John B. Meacham, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, did just what his congregation did not expect him to do in the morning service at the church Sunday. The Rev. Mr. Meacham announced that he would discuss little things in a general way and specifically and people were led to believe that he would preach a sermon on children and the manner in which they should be reared. He announced that children should sit with their parents as far as possible.

But it was the tongue instead of the little folks that he took to task. The pastor pointed out that the tongue can not only be the loudest little thing in the world, but it may also be the best and the meanest little thing in the world. His sermon was full of sound advice and was one that will long be remembered.

THIRTY-THREE BUSHELS.

STATE BOARD TO GIVE TREATMENT

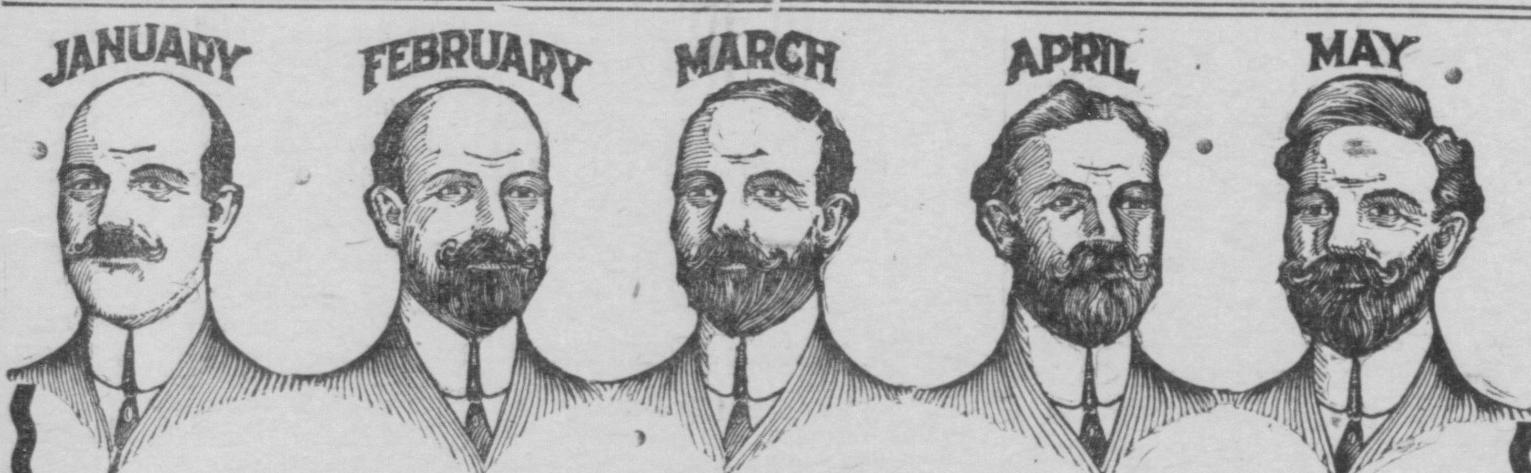

All Persons Appealing For Aid Will Be Treated Free of Charge For Hydrophobia.

Arrangements Are Made With Eastern Concern For Delivery of Serum to be Used.

The State Board of Health will treat all persons appealing for aid under the new law providing for treatment for indigent persons afflicted with rabies, in the pathological laboratory maintained by the board, on the third floor of the statehouse, according to a decision just reached, according to an Indianapolis dispatch. Arrangements have been made with an eastern concern for the delivery of serum used in treating such cases. Assistant Secretary King, of the board, said the patients could be treated there as well as in any of the sanitaria of the city, and that the board would thus have the added advantage of having all the data collected in the study of cases. Later the State board expects to arrange with local physicians to give the treatment.

Grew a Full Growth of Hair on a Bald Head

Here's the Proof

For two or three years my hair had been falling out and getting quite thin, until the top of my head was entirely bald. About four months ago I commenced using Sage and Sulphur. The first bottle seemed to do some good and I kept using it regularly, until now I have used four bottles. The whole top of my head is now fairly covered with hair and it keeps coming in thicker. I shall keep on using it a while longer, as I notice a constant improvement.

FLIES HATCH IN DEBRIS

While Rushville is a healthy city, this hot weather is going to breed disease, owing to the very warm temperature and there should be a general cleaning up, cutting of weeds, cleaning up alleys, clearing away of all decayed matter, etc., around the homes, keep flies out of the house, see that there are no barrels, tubs, etc., standing around the premises to breed mosquitoes, etc.

If there are barrels of water that can not be rid of, or cess pools around, pour a pint of coal oil on the surface of the water or more if needed which will prevent the mosquito larvae from propagating.

See that all piles of manure are removed from near your home and every other decaying substance, for these are where the flies are hatched. One pile of manure will hatch out millions and a hundred families swatting flies every minute of the day could not kill the myriads of pests that would come from that manure pile. If your neighbor refuses to clean up notify the health officer.

Give Sheep a Place on the Farm

By H. E. ALLEN, Purdue University School of Agriculture
Purdue University Agricultural Extension

A Double Income, Wool and Lambs.

Indiana farmers are coming more and more to realize the importance of maintaining soil fertility and of renovating worn out fields. Commercial fertilizers have their place, but in no way are they able to take the place of well cared-for manures made by live stock. Knowing this the question arises as to what kind of live stock is best suited to the conditions of the farm. So far cattle, either beef or dairy, have adjusted themselves to farm conditions all over the state. Hogs, too, are found on nearly every place. Not so with sheep, however. They are found on a relatively small number of farms as compared with either hogs or cattle. This is unfortunate because there are few farms hilly or level, fertile or infertile, upon which a small flock of some one of the breeds will not thrive, and prove a benefit to the farm itself and a good source of income to its owner. Sheep are able to fit themselves into almost any condition and environment and will often give generous returns where other classes of live stock would be failure.

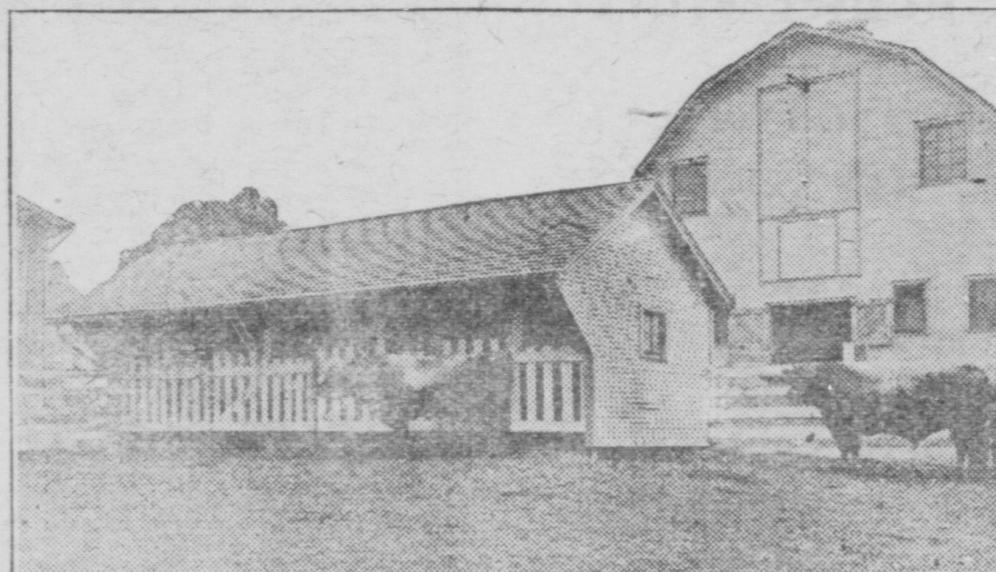

No doubt many will say that sheep cannot be made profitable on high priced lands. To those who make this statement or believe in it, allow me to refer you to the large numbers of sheep kept on the richest farms in England. The tenants of many of these farms say that the rent could not be paid without the help of the flock. The most practical question, however, is whether sheep are a profitable proposition. Although the business has its ups and downs, like all other enterprises, it is a very bad time indeed when a small flock of say 10 to 25 ewes will not pay its way. Besides the benefit they give the farm by way of destroying weeds, and increasing the soil fertility, they will consume a larger variety of feeds than other animals and yield a double income of lambs and wool. Some one once asked a Kansas farmer what he did to get rid of the weeds on the farm. He replied that he sold the weeds as mutton at 5 and 6 cents a pound.

There need be no special provision made for taking care of a few head of sheep on the average farm, as they are able to take care of themselves if they have access to water and a good dry shelter. They require less labor and trouble than any other farm stock and it is safe to say that anyone can make money without drudgery from a small flock.

On the other hand, on the poorer, hilly farms, sheep are profitable just

Care of the Dairy Sire

By P. H. CRANE, Dairy Department, Purdue Experiment Station
Purdue University Agricultural Extension

Bull Pen and Shed, Purdue Dairy Herd.

The care of the dairy sire is one that has received considerable attention, but in spite of this fact, the half of the herd embodied in the herd bull, is very frequently given too little or improper care.

In many herds will be found bulls that are kept continually in a box stall, where they receive but little exercise, see other members of the herd but seldom, and too often receive feed and water very irregularly. Such conditions are not conducive to health and good service. Animals under such conditions often become over fat, slow in service, and frequently cross.

The herd bull must be cared for in a manner that will keep him in good health, and make him a sure and quick breeder. The question that should be considered, after knowing what is desired, is, how can these conditions be brought about with least expense and labor?

There are a great number of different methods of caring for bulls that give very good results, such as keeping the bull tied in a stall along with the remainder of the herd, giving him a chance for exercise every day either in a lot alone, with other bulls, or by snapping a rope from his ring to a ring on a wire a few feet above him. Another good method is to have a box stall built so that the bull can see the other animals of the herd and in addition to such quarters, it is well that he have opportunity for more exercise than is possible in a box stall. All of these methods require a little more work than is always necessary.

An excellent method is one now used in connection with the Purdue experiment station herd. This method allows all the bulls to run together in a bull pen connected with a shed that is tight on three sides and open on the south. It should be dry and have stalls, in order that the bulls may be shut up when the cows are taken into the pen to be bred. The above illustration shows a view of the pen and shed where the bulls of the Purdue Dairy Herd stay the year around. A water tank in the pen supplies the water and the bulls receive their feed through small doors in the north side of the shed.

Under these conditions the bulls are kept in good breeding condition and are quick and sure in service.

The Care of Milk and Cream

By H. C. MILLS

Dairy Department, Purdue Experiment Station

Purdue University Agricultural Extension.

Milk and cream can easily be classified among the most perishable products of the farm as well as the most valuable. Frequently these products receive the poorest kind of treatment and the least effort is made for their protection from the injures to which they are susceptible.

Especial care must be used at this season of the year if these products are to reach the market in first class condition. The first step is to keep the milk clean, and the second to keep it cold. Warm, unclean milk becomes tainted, sour or "rotten" in a few hours. Cold, clean milk, remains sweet, delicious and wholesome for many hours.

The Milking.

The production of clean milk necessarily starts with the milking of the cows. Clean cows can be milked in clean barns with clean hands at this season of the year with less effort than at any other, as the cows are in the barn usually but a short time each day.

If the manure is kept removed from the barn and the barn kept clean, the breeding places for flies will be removed and the flies will be less numerous. Flies are a source of infection to milk because they carry filth into it.

Cleaning of Utensils.

An especial effort must be made to keep all utensils thoroughly clean. Old, rusty, battered buckets and cans should be discarded and all utensils used should be carefully washed and scalded. If any milk is left in the seams of buckets or cans it becomes a source of infection for any fresh milk or cream that may come in contact with it. A good, "stiff fibre" brush is best for washing dairy utensils, and the use of sal soda or washing powder is advisable.

Cooling of Milk or Cream.

As soon as obtained, the milk or cream, if a cream separator is used, should be cooled at once to a temperature of at least 54 degrees Fahrenheit, which is the temperature of well water on the average farm. The use of an aerator and cooler are advisable.

Every farm that is producing dairy products should have a suitable place for storing them. Too frequently farms that afford good barns for sheltering live stock, and substantial storage houses for the field crops, have no adequate place for keeping milk and its products. Milk, cream and butter quickly absorb surrounding odors, and for this reason, if kept in the kitchen, in the cellar or in the refrigerator containing other articles, undesirable flavors may be produced in these dairy products. A small milk house can be built for a small amount of money. A trough can be placed in it in which cans of milk or cream can be set. All water pumped for stock can be run through this trough. Cans about one foot in diameter, known as "shot gun" cans, afford rapid cooling facilities. The milk or cream should be stirred to hasten the cooling, bringing the milk or cream in contact with the cool surface of the can.

If nothing better can be afforded, a barrel should be purchased, sawed in two and placed by the pump. A can of milk can be set in this half barrel and surrounded with cold water. The water in the half barrel should be changed frequently enough to keep the water cool.

Cream that is kept for any length of time should be stirred occasionally so that the top surface will not dry and to keep the cream uniform throughout. If this is not done, a layer of dried cream forms on the surface which makes accurate sampling difficult for the hauler or may cause white specks in the butter if the cream is churned at home.

Newspapers and Crime.

Dr. Frances Fenton gets a Doctor of Philosophy degree from Chicago University by a paper condemning the newspapers for printing crime news. She finds that the more yellow newspapers print 42 per cent of "anti-social" news, and the cleanest papers print 18 per cent.

If she counted up the "anti-social" news found in the Bible, including all it tells about Solomon's wives and so on, she would find a large proportion of crime there. Anyone who tells the truth about modern life must tell many things that are harmful to the interests of society.

The effect of the publication of crime news depends very much upon the point of view of the man who writes it. Some men secretly sympathize with crime, and show an undertone of admiration for the criminal's smartness.

Other men see farther into the consequences of crime, and think of the suffering that is caused to the victims. Instead of expatiating on the cleverness of the thief, they picture the meanness of the man who preys vulture like on the reward of other's industry, often causing suffering to the innocent.

Criminals would like it very well to have a gag placed about the mouth of the press. Every copy circulated is a sleuth hound on the trail of the fleeing miscreant.

James Whitecomb Riley may have earned enough from poetry to give Indianapolis a $75,000 library site, but how much more his countrymen would have loved him, had he collected personal items for a country newspaper.

A dowry tax to stop our rich girls from marrying titled foreigners is asked by Representative Kahn. It is bad enough to lose these girls' money, but it would be worse if to escape the tax their dukes and earls should come over here to live.

It is charged that Ambassador John Hays Hammond "nudged the king," but that monarch probably thought John was cold and stiff because he did not slap him on the back.

The New York East Siders have been rioting for ice, but nothing would persuade them to move out in the country where you can keep cool by going swimming twice a day.

Thirty-one States have ratified the income tax, but people who have steadfastly resisted the temptation to acquire an income are not worrying.

Apparently the Indianapolis Sun must search far and wide for its two column "display type" editorial, when it must depend upon misconstrued statements of the former congressmen from this district in order to have a topic on which to give some advice.

The Sun copies the following from James E. Watson's recent Washington interview, "In this day and age, whenever somebody proposes to build a railroad into undeveloped territory, an effort is made to send him to the penitentiary," and proceeds to expound at length. The Sun cites as examples two Indiana counties, namely Daviess and Wayne. It is suggested that the two counties be offended for the alleged disciples of the people and the terrible boudoirs of Big Business have branded them as undeveloped districts.

We refer the editor of the Sun to the dictionary for the word undeveloped. Undoubtedly Mr. Watson had no reference to the building of railroads or steam lines in Indiana. That is plainly evident from a proceeding statement in the same interview which is; "I am against the modern idea conservation run to seed. I believe it is our duty, instead of locking up our national resources, to develop them and make our country blossom like a rose."

Surely the great railroads of the United States have accomplished much developing the undeveloped sections of America. There are portions that would not have been penetrated until many years later had it not been for industrious capitalists who pushed their exploits into uninhabited parts of the United States and for many years operated at a loss until the section felt the effects of civilization.

EDITORIALETTES.

What is so rare as a cold day in July?

And perhaps the Rushville school children can show that Madison teacher something about model schools.

We have a thermometer which we will sell cheap. Good reason for selling.

If a hot wave comes this evening the above piffle is nolled.

Not many months will pass before the dear girls will be finding how impossible it is to remove a life-sized coat of tan by following the prescription of beauty hints.

If congress adjourns this month how will it ever be possible to amuse the children before school begins without the daily congressional records?

There is a big kick about the price of ice in many cities over the State, but as the ice man is in the business from a purely philanthropic love of humanity, he can not be expected to sell any lower.

After the discussion of such momentous questions, it may be a relief to remark that these are great nights to sleep. That is, if you are needing any of that.

Flatrock spent Sunday quietly in its bed.

LOOK OUT.

They say no stylish girl would think of putting on a skirt that didn't squeeze about the knees and ankles till they hurt. They say: "We'll all be waddling, shuffling, like one with gout.

Authority Writes That Ownie Bush is Best Shortstop in American League.

THAT'S SAYING MUCH FOR HIM

Popular Player Once Played Here in

Tattered Clothes—Promised to be a Star.

Ownie Bush, who once buzzed around the diamonds on the South Main street grounds and who came here with tattered clothes when a mere boy and applied for a berth on the local team, is now the best shortstop in the American League, which is saying much for Bush. A well known sporting writer says of Bush,

Baseball experts must hand the plum to Ownie Bush of the Detroit Tigers as the leading shortstop of the American league. For many a season these honors belonged to Rhody Wallace of the St. Louis Browns. Rhody's wonderful stops, remarkable recoveries and wizard-like throwing have for years been the admiration of the circuit.

But this little gentleman Ownie Bush has pushed Wallace off the pedestal on which he has so long dallied.

Bush in action reminds one of those pond bugs that skim about so agilely from spot to spot—a little dart, and there you are. Bush darts about the field like light. He covers a world of ground, does it easily, almost poetically, one might say; is not subject in the least to nervous disorders commonly known as rattles, can throw with Wallace and is the most valuable shortstop in the American league today.

Jennings was certainly fortunate to pick up this lad in the hour of his need three years ago. It was when his infield had gone to pieces and O'Leary, Coughlin and company had cracked sadly that Indianapolis surrendered this lad in midseason. From the jump he made good.

FAMILY REUNION
SEASON IS HERE

Millers Will Hold Twelfth Annual Event in Arlington-Methodist Church August 16.

PAPER WOULD ANNOUNCE THEM

The season of family reunions is approaching and the time for the announcing the annual events is at hand. The Miller family is the first to announce the date for their 1911 meeting. The twelfth annual reunion of that family will be held in the Methodist church at Arlington on Wednesday, August 16. All persons who know themselves to be related to the family are earnestly requested to be present. A basket dinner will be served in the basement of the church.

The Daily Republican will be pleased to announce the dates of coming family reunions if the proper notice is sent to the office. The paper will also be glad to publish accounts of the meetings as soon after they take place as possible.

ICE FAMINE.

Lewisville Road Traveler: Lewisville is not the only town with an ice plant that can not supply the demand. Rushville, Knightstown, New Castle and other places have found it necessary to ship in ice from quite a distance. Last week New Castle ice dealers cut the majority of their customers down to only ten cents worth at a time.

AMUSEMENTS

The Palace will show a comedy and a realistic drama tonight. "The Abernathy Kids Rescue" is the title of a thrilling experience in the life of two Abernathy boys who were made famous by their trip on ponies from Oklahoma to New York City to greet Theodore Roosevelt when he landed from his trip abroad. "A Novel Experiment" is a Selig comedy which is said to depict many humorous situations and scenes.

The Vaude will show a good program tonight which includes a Reliance and a Powers film. "A Sonata of Souls" is the Reliance subject which is said to be a drama of great worth in which a life story of a pathetic nature is rehearsed. The Powers film contains two comedies, "The Crisis" and "The Joys of Persecution" are declared by the management to be among the best comedies which have been shown here in recent weeks. "Down by the Rio Grande" is the illustrated song.

"A Struggle For Life" is the title of the Selig drama which will be shown at the Portola. The story while it was being enacted for the picture came very near being a tragedy instead of a drama which makes it very realistic. It is an exciting animal act and the scenes border on the thrilling, so real are they. Miss Williams, the leading woman for the Selig company, was injured by a leopard when it sprang at her and she was just barely saved from a terrible death. Those scenes are depicted in the picture. "In Blossom Time" is a Kalem drama which is said to be unusually good. Paul Williams of Morristown will play at the Portola the first three days this week.

WILL QUARANTINE
BABY PARALYSIS.

The State board of health has notified the county and city health officers that the disease known as anterior poliomyelitis, has been held to be highly contagious and that all cases must hereafter be placed under quarantine.

In addition to this the board must be notified by telegraph or telephone, or by fast mail, as soon as an authentic case is discovered. This action is required in no other disease.

The State board further requires that quarantine cards be placed at once and the quarantine rigidly enforced.

While it is called "infantile paralysis," it is not of necessity confined to persons of tender age, though that is usually the case.

The following rules have been adopted by the State board of health and must be closely obeyed by physicians:

Rule 1.—It shall be the duty of the attending physician to immediately report each and every case of epidemic poliomyelitis to the health officer having jurisdiction, giving name, age and place of residence of the patient. Cases occurring without incorporated cities or towns should be immediately reported to the health officers of such incorporated cities and towns.

Rule 2.—It shall be the duty of the county health commissioner and all city and town health officers, whenever a case of epidemic poliomyelitis shall come to their notice, to immediately quarantine the same according to the law and the rules, and immediately report the same to the State board of health at Indianapolis by mail, telegraph or telephone, at the expense of the State board.

Rule 3.—It shall be the further duty of all physicians and health officers to co-operate with the State board of health and the epidemiologist of the board in the study of epidemic poliomyelitis and other contagious disease, by giving all possible information either personally or on blanks provided for the purpose.

ACT QUICKLY

Delay Has Been Dangerous in Rushville.

Do the right thing at the right time. Act quickly in time of danger. Backache is kidney danger. Doan's Kidney Pills act quickly. Plenty of evidence to prove this.

Harrison Levi, 931 North Sexton street, Rushville, Ind., says: "I have nothing but praise for Doan's Kidney Pills, for they have been of great benefit to me. I was subject to attacks of kidney trouble and no doubt the complaint was brought on by the hardships I endured while in the war. I had severe pains in my back and the kidney secretions were irregular in passage. This weakness disturbed my rest and I knew that something must be done. Three years ago Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention and procuring a box at F. B. Johnson & Co.'s Drug Store I began their use. In a short time the backache and kidney weakness disappeared and I was in much better health. I cannot say that I am completely cured, but I know that I can rely on Doan's Kidney Pills for relief. I have previously given a public statement in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills and I gladly endorse them again."

me. When I saw him again he appeared to have been drinking. I put him in a carriage to get him out of sight and he was driven away, where I don't know, for I have not seen him since. That is all I know about that phase of the matter." My companion was following my every word and action with the intentness of a watching lynx, and when I had finished pounced upon my last and qualifying words instantly.

"You say that is all you know about that phase of the matter. Very good. But what else do you know?" Driven fairly into a corner I answered desparately:

"I know he had a key to the house. While I was sitting with him at the interview I have just mentioned he became angry at the thought of uncle's refusal to assist him, and struck the table several times with some small metallic object which he had tightly clenched in his hand. The familiar appearance of the object immediately attracted my attention and I managed to see enough of it to know that it was a key to this place. I was somewhat surprised, not knowing how he had come into possession of it; but thinking it was his own business I did not mention it to him in his then condition of mind. I do not believe that he knew that I had noticed it, or was even aware that he had exhibited it in his excitement, for immediately after his outburst he thrust it back into his overcoat pocket. I think that I have now without reservation told you all that I know concerning his words and actions within the last few days. He can undoubtedly explain his possessionhip of the key as well as his whereabouts last night to your entire satisfaction. But I hope it will not even be necessary to hurt his pride by questioning him."

"And his financial condition these days?" pursued my companion contemplatively. I shifted uneasily. It was plain that LeDuc was going to dig deep and ask me questions that would make it necessary for me to put Bruce in an unfavorable light, and it is not a pleasant task for one to be compelled to cast suspicion, even by inference, upon a life-long friend, especially when the friend is of his own blood. Yet a serious crime had been committed against both society at large and another of my kinsmen in particular, and should I conceal any essential fact that I knew and LeDuc discover that I had done so, it would put me in the miserable plight before Uncle Abner as having tried to shield some one and thus acted against him in the recovery of at least a portion of what had been pilfered from him. I did not for an instant believe that Bruce would even contemplate such an act, even though standing blindfold against the wall of financial despair, yet certainly there were things which in justice to everybody concerned he should explain; and while I did not doubt that he could do so without difficulty, I disliked exceedingly to speak against him.

LeDuc leaned forward with deep interest in his face. "Then if there are but four keys to the front door known to be in existence, and as your uncle has his own as well as the one which you formerly possessed, and as Mrs. Tebbets still has hers, the only one remaining to be accounted for should be in the possession of your other cousin, Miss Winton. If she still retains hers, then the one Bruce had must of necessity be a duplicate, and a duplicate could not have been made without the maker having for time had one of the originals. That phase of the matter we will take up, if necessary, when we come to it, but what we want to know now is regarding the originals. And to ascertain that we must know whether Miss Winton has parted keepership of hers. I must see her at once."

"Perhaps it would be well for me to call her up over the wire and ask her to come here," I suggested. "Uncle will be glad to see her, and I know she will dance with anxiety to come when she hears about this." He nodded his acquiescence, and going to the telephone I briefly put her in possession of the news with the request that she come to us immediately. In her excitement and eagerness she dropped the ear instrument instead of replacing it upon the hood and I could hear her as she rushed about the room calling upon her mother for her hat and gloves. Fifteen minutes later she was ringing at the front door. LeDuc shot me a look full of significance.

"Did you say that she and Bruce are engaged, or something to that effect?" he inquired, referring to a remark which I had dropped a few moments before. I nodded.

"So Bruce intimated to me. I knew they were desperately fond of each other and he told me that had he not been wiped out he would have married her. At any rate, she does not seem to have her key, with her this morning," was my answer. Down stairs we heard Mrs. Tebbets opening the door, and a moment later with a patter of feet and a rustle of skirts Clare bounded in upon us. Her eyes were dilated and she seemed almost ready to burst from suppressed excitement. Her first words were about Uncle Abner and as to whether he was now entirely out of danger. I assured her that he was and then introduced LeDuc, requesting that she seat herself a moment with us before going into the other room. She dropped upon the edge of a chair, fidgeting and nervous. LeDuc, immediately all courtseyed him aside his cigar.

"I will detain you but a moment, Miss Winton," he apologized, his faint habitual smile breaking into an affable one. "But as I am investigating this affair in the interests of your uncle and in the hope of recovering more or less of his money, I am going to assume that you, as one of the family, will be glad to give me your assistance. At the present moment I am devoting my attention to locating the keys of the house, it being evident that the premises were entered by the front door, as the back door was bolted from the inside. Will you be good enough to let me have yours for a few moments?" Clare moved nervously.

"It's queer about that key; I can't find it," she said hastily. "I always carry it in my purse, but when I searched for it a few moments ago on my way over here it was not there. For the life of me I cannot imagine where I could have misplaced it, for I have been very careful to always keep it in that one place. I simply know I have not lost it, but it is just as strange as it can be." She squirmed like a worried schoolgirl.

"Suppose we go back a little. When do you remember of having it last?" he pursued. Her forehead wrinkled with thought.

"Three or four days ago when I came over here. I have not had occasion to think of it since until Tom called me up a few moments ago. I am as worried about it as I can be, but I am certain that I have not lost it."

I saw LeDuc's gaze run over the graceful form of the girl and then settle upon her face with an expression that was beyond doubt one of unequivocal approval. That Clare, whose heart was as open to the world as is the heart of a flower to the light of the sun, could harbor any secret as dark as this was preposterous to one who knew her. I had never met a girl with sounder morals or better instincts, and her character was of spun gold. And even though she loved Bruce and had always defended his frailties, I did not believe that she would have shielded him had she believed him guilty of an unnatural crime as this, matter of history though it is that one can never tell what heights or depths a woman will achieve to save the man who carries her heart. Quietly I asked her when she had seen Bruce last, and knowing her mannerisms as I did became instantly aware that my question had put her on the rack, for a faint shadow flitted cloudlike across her face. Yet she answered me with her accustomed frankness.

"Day before yesterday—and I do not understand it either. He was to see me yesterday evening, but he neither came nor sent word as to why he broke the engagement. It is not like him to do such a thing, and while I suppose there is some good reason back of it, I do not know what it is. Anyway, I am worried." She dropped her eyes and tapped gently on the floor with her toe. "I wish you would try and get him on the wire, Tom, and find out if he is all right. That is all I care to know at present." I assented and started for the telephone, but had made but a step or two before I heard first his familiar ring at the door and a moment later his equally familiar voice from the hall below. Then up the stairs he came and at the first footfall I halted, listening. Usually he mounted something after the fashion of a scurrying cat in a series of light leaps, but now his feet pounded the boards with heavy uncertainty. I opened the door before him, but at the first sight of his face I stepped back.

He advanced to the doorway, faltered there with—one hand braced against the jamb and the crimson flushing his face as he saw Clare amongst us. His eyes were as red-shot as a bloodhound's, and the hand that hung by his side was aspen. The unmistakable marks of an evil night were stamped about his mouth and his usually clear face looked puttyish and mottled. I heard Clare gasp as she arose and slowly approached him with unbelieveing eyes. He stepped aside as though to avoid her, his glance falling to the floor.

"I have heard about it—it is in the papers. Tell me the particulars," he said with a hoarse intonation. From the bottom of my heart I pitied him as I gently pulled the girl back to her seat and answered him in matter of fact tones.

"There is nothing to tell at present except that the safe was burglarized last night and the $40,000 stolen. I spent the night downtown and found Uncle Abner bound and unconscious when I returned home this morning. He was not much hurt and is all right now. This is Mr. LeDuc, who has been engaged by Uncle Abner to try and ferret out the matter. I think that is the whole thing in a nut shell." He stood as if in a half daze, his gaze rambling over us.

"Any clues?" he mumbled at length. I made no spoken reply, merely bowing in the direction of the detective. And at the signal LeDuc immediately assumed vocal command.

"The only thing we have learned as yet which seems to be of any particular interest is that Miss Winton's key has mysteriously disappeared. All the others have been accounted for and we are anxious to locate hers. She is unable to offer any explanation, and we therefore turn to you as one who is frequently in her company in the hope that you may offer a suggestion. Can you offer any thought along that line?"

He shook his head decisively and without hesitation, and I leaned back in my chair with a long breath of astonishment. I had been thoroughly confident that he would at once admit his possession of it and offer some explanation that would immediately satisfy everybody. LeDuc was looking steadily at him, apparently as puzzled by his answer as was I. To all outward appearances there was something hidden beneath the skin here, and I determined to make a quick thrust at the heart of the matter, bleeding him of his secret for his own good.

"Where were you last night, Bruce?" I asked quietly. The pallor of his cheeks took on the unhealthy hue of wet ashes and he stood mute with an unpleasant narrowing of his eyes. For a long minute the silence was unbroken, LeDuc scanning him impatiently and Clare, her pupils expanded, leaning far forward in her intentness. Then he shifted sullenly upon his feet.

"I have no reply to make to that question at present."

I signaled to LeDuc, who instantly caught the cue. "But perhaps if the young lady would pardon us—" he murmured with a courteous bow to Clare. She arose upon the instant, and glancing neither to right nor left, passed into my uncle's apartments, while Bruce gloomingly after her with tightened lips moved no muscle. As the door closed behind her I made another effort in his behalf.

"I wish you would be reasonable in this matter, Bruce. You ought to know that you can trust us implicitly when I give you my word as I now do. If you have any reason—any man's reason—to think that your whereabouts last night if known to Clare would distress her, Mr. LeDuc and I will bind ourselves upon our honor to keep your communication confidential. Later on you make such explanation to her as you may desire, but in view of certain statements which you made to me it is necessary that our mutual friend here should know where you spent the night. Will you tell us?" A pale glow of passion, phosphorescent like, appeared deep behind his eyes and he answered me doggedly, almost defiantly.

"No. It is a matter which at present concerns only myself. Nor do I understand your insinuations when you say it is for my own good that I make confidants of you. What do you mean by such attempted intimidation?"

CLOSED HIS BAR SEEKING HEALTH

Goshen Hotel Keeper Also Puts Ban On Tobacco.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE ADVICE

When He Placed Himself Under Ministrations of C. E. Healers George Alderman Was Told That So Long as He Used or Sold Liquors or Tobacco the Healing Influences Would Be Ineffective.

Goshen, Ind., July 17.—Not to reopen, the bar of the Hotel Hascall, the largest hotel in the city, has been closed and in the future no liquors or tobacco in any form will be sold at the Hascall. This policy is adopted by George F. Alderman, owner of the hotel, who is now at his Lake Wawasee cottage taking Christian Science treatment. Mr. Alderman contributed to the "wet" fund in the recent city option election and was active at the polls. When Christian Science workers told him the treatment would be ineffective as long as he either used or sold liquors or tobacco in any form, he, with Mrs. Alderman, ordered the hotel bar closed and disposed of the license under the terms of the regulation law.

SLANDER SUIT

Revived Story of a Shortage in Army Post Exchange.

Indianapolis, July 17.—Further details of the matter leading up to the bringing of a slander suit by Lieutenant Walter Reed of the army post against the wife of Captain Eames have come to light with them the story of the irregularities in the books of the post exchange. It seems that prior to the coming of Lieutenant Reed to the army post in 1909, a clerk by the name of Hull was employed in the post exchange, which has charge of the purchase of many kinds of supplies and the cost of which is about $100,000 a year. Lieutenant Reed discovered that something was wrong, and the investigation showed that Hull had appropriated about $300. He was charged with taking the money and steps were taken to prosecute him, but it was finally concluded that the entire sum would be lost if Hull was prosecuted, and when he repaid the money the matter was dropped. Hull was discharged and his whereabouts is unknown.

Brookville, Ind., July 17.—A passenger train on the Big Four railroad left the track as it was slowing down to make the stop, and although all the coaches were derailed, none of them overturned. Aside from being shaken up, none of the passengers was injured.

Police Quelled Mob.

DON'T PULL OUT THE GRAY HAIRS

A Few Applications of a Simple Remedy Will Bring Back the Natural Color.

"Pull out one gray hair and a dozen will take its place" is an old saying, which is, to a great extent, true, if no steps are taken to stop the cause. When gray hairs appear it is a sign that Nature needs assistance. It is Nature's call for help. Gray hair, dull, lifeless hair, or hair that is falling out, is not necessarily a sign of advancing age, for there are thousands of elderly people with perfect heads of hair without a single streak of gray.

When gray hairs come, or when the hair seems to be lifeless or dead, some good, reliable hair-restoring treatment should be resorted to at once. Specialists say that one of the best preparations to use is the old-fashioned "sage tea" which our grandparents used. The best preparation of this kind is Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a preparation of domestic sage and sulphur, scientifically compounded with later discovered hair tonics and stimulants, the whole mixture being carefully balanced and tested by experts.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is clean and wholesome and perfectly harmless. It refreshes dry, parched hair, removes dandruff and gradually restores faded or gray hair to its natural color.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists. Special Agents, Hargrove and Mullin Druggists, Rushville, Indiana.

INVESTIGATION OF WILEY CASE

Indiana Representative Demands All the Facts.

TRAIN GUNS ON INTERESTS

Mr. Cox Calls on the Administration to Furnish Congress With Every Possible Side Light That Will Help to Solve the Mystery of the Particular Antagonism to the Government's Food Expert.

Washington, July 17.—Representative Cox of Indiana, expressing the belief that persistent efforts to have Dr. Harvey W. Wiley removed from office have been made by "powerful special interests, whose welfare in life attaches more to the dollar than to the health, happiness and prosperity of the people," has introduced a resolution calling for further information.

His measure contemplates a broader investigation of the Wiley case than was contemplated when the house committee on expenditures in the department of agriculture decided to investigate the charges made against Dr. Wiley in connection with the personnel board's recommendation for his removal.

Mr. Cox declared that he wanted to find out what interests were after Dr. Wiley. His resolution, he said, was in no way antagonistic to the work of the expenditures committee, which will meet next week.

He said Dr. Wiley "had fearlessly performed his duty in the enforcement of the pure food and drug law to the benefit of the many millions of people throughout the country."

His resolution calls on both the attorney general and the secretary of agriculture "to furnish the house of representatives with all letters, records, telegrams, protests and objections now on file in their offices, protesting against the appointment of Dr. Wiley as chief of the bureau of chemistry, or protesting against his retention in office, with all letters and data of every kind protesting against his rulings and decisions in the administration of said law."

WICKERSHAM TALKS

Attorney General Has a Word to Say About Those Alaska Cases.

Washington, July 17.—Attorney General Wickersham has made an informal reply to the charge of Delegate Wickersham of Alaska that he had allowed the statute of limitation to expire in certain Alaska criminal cases without taking action.

"I have not given a definite opinion that the statute of limitation has expired in all of these cases," he said. "It is not improbable that criminal action may be taken. The matter is still under investigation."

The Weather For the Week.

New York, July 17.—The weather bureau has issued a bulletin stating that the barometric pressure is abnormally high over the interior of Canada and Alaska and relatively low over the Atlantic ocean. This pressure distribution is strongly indicative of temperature below the season. The week will open with generally fair weather east of the Rocky mountains except that showers are probable in the middle Atlantic and New England states and during the next several days in the south Atlantic and gulf states. An area of unsettled weather and showers will develop over the middle west about Thursday and thence spread eastward to the Atlantic states by the latter part of the week.

Railroad Confessed Judgment.

South Bend, Ind., July 17.—Louis A. Freeland, who was mistaken for a striker and shot by John Peck, a special detective, during the Grand Trunk railroad strike a year ago, has received a verdict of $3,800 in a $40,000 damage suit against the company in the St. Joseph circuit court. The defendant corporation confessed judgment to this amount.

Brave Young Woman Drowned.

Evansville, Ind., July 17.—Miss Bonnie Waldon, twenty-one years old, daughter of Dr. William Waldon of Newburg, Ind., was drowned at Cypress Beach while trying to rescue Miss Anna Griffith of this city, who had gone beyond her depth. Miss Waldon sank while another member of the party was rescuing Miss Griffith.

Big Plant Closed Down.

South Bend, Ind., July 17.—Two thousand employees, including the force in the rubber department, of the Mishawaka Woolen Manufacturing company, have been laid off indefinitely. Although the officials of the company refuse to make the statement, it is said that the plant will be idle during the next two months.

Scalp Torn From Head.

Workmen In a Pennsylvania Mine Meet Death.

TWENTY-ONE LIVES WERE LOST

Not One in the Sykesville Shaft of the Cascade Coal and Coke Company at DuBois Was Left to Tell the Story of the Explosion—Government Relief Car on Hand and Investigation Will Be Conducted.

DuBois, Pa., July 17.—By an explosion of gas in the Sykesville shaft of the Cascade Coal and Coke company at 9:30 Saturday night, twenty-one lives were snuffed out. Every miner in the southern portion of the workings perished. Few of the men were killed by the explosion itself, and from the position of the bodies found by rescuers it was evident that following the flash many of the men gathered up their belongings and were endeavoring to reach an outlet when overcome and suffocated by the fatal afterdamp that invariably follows an explosion of a gaseous nature. Only one victim was mutilated beyond recognition, and he was identified by the brass number check worn around his neck. Most of the dead men bore no marks whatever, indicating that death came through suffocation.

To those on the surface the first knowledge of the explosion came when the safety door on the big ventilating fan was blown open. Immediately a rescue party under direction of Fire Boss John Brown descended the 150-foot shaft to investigate.

At the bottom no indication of the awful tragedy was apparent, and the rescuers penetrated a mile and a half underground before they came onto a group of six men huddled together in death. These victims were sent to the surface and eighty-three volunteer rescuers began a thorough search for more bodies, with the result that by noon Sunday eleven more were rescued, but four missing but known to have been working in the devastated section, probably buried beneath rock and dirt, as in several places the roof was tumbled down by the explosion. The government relief car with a corps of experts arrived at the scene Sunday afternoon and an investigation was made. Theories as to the cause of the explosion are many, but the one most accepted is that a pocket of gas was struck and ignited from a lamp, thus creating the conditions for the afterdamp.

All the dead but three are foreigners. Usually over 250 men are at work in this shaft, but owing to it being the day after payday and the Sunday shift, only a few were at work.

A REVOLTING CRIME

Revealed by Inquest Into Death of a Young Tennessee Girl.

Nashville, Tenn., July 17.—Henry Steimle, Franz Steimle and Mrs. Lizzie Steimle, brother, father and stepmother, respectively, of Tilda Dart Steimle, a young girl found murdered on her father's farm on Paradise Ridge, fourteen miles west of Nashville, were arrested, charged with the murder of the girl. The arrests followed an inquest and upon authority of the attorney general. Not a great deal of evidence was brought out at the inquest, but enough to show it a most revolting case. The girl was about to become a mother and authorities believe possibly the murder was committed to hide another crime.

Parkersburg, W. Va., July 17.—Earle H. Kunst, who committed suicide in Washington, D. C., is a member of one of the most prominent families of Parkersburg. MEETINGS GIVEN GOOD IMPETUS night before they even thought of oil and then it was too late. In this life, the minister said, so many people wait until the last hour and then find that it is too late. He pointed out that the midnight hour is not God's hour.

"Well, perhaps," continued the speaker, "many will say that the wise virgins should have given oil to the foolish virgins so that their lights might shine and they might attend the ceremony. But they couldn't they couldn't. Only God gives that and it can come from no one else. We can not impart God's gift, although we may receive it. The wise virgins could advise the foolish ones to get oil at the last hour but they could not furnish it to them from their supply."

In extending the invitation the Rev. J. W. Turner, pastor of the St. Paul M. E. church, said that he wished to impress on the audience that the door to salvation is still open. He stated that there is only one door to enter although there is another door which is closed. He declared that it was the door of the heart that is barred against Christ's incoming. The minister said that many attended the tabernacle meetings and there learned themselves and their true conditions as they had never known them before. But they put it off, he said, and continued to say "not now." He declared that the sons and daughters may not be saved by the parents' full vessel of oil. He said that although there are people, who are not good enough to suit the devil, who may be honored in a community by reason of their family connections, but it is not so with religion. He pointed out that their vessel must be full and that their family relations will never save them.

The main auditorium of the church was crowded and the Sunday school room was almost full at the service. The interest in the coming services is apparently very intense and great success in the campaign for lost souls is predicted by the ministers and other workers. The special music by the St. Paul M. E. church choir was very good.

DAMAGE SUIT FOR $5,000.

Lewisville Road Traveler: John Lyons and Clarence Beard have filed suit for $5,000-damages against Bert Souder and Emory Casey, alleging that the latter parties, at a public sale sold them 14 Duroe brood sows for $350, which had been exposed to cholera. Eleven of the fourteen died, and 103 other hogs on the Beard-Lyons place also contracted the disease and died. The plaintiffs claim Souder and Casey knew the swine to be infected when sold.

"The Doctrine of Stage of Development in the Life of the Child" is a lecture in which Prof. Van Ormer will point out some vagaries of the doctrine and the dependable foundation of the doctrine. In that lecture he will outline a somewhat detailed study of the several stages with their characteristics and needs.

Miss Deitz of Madison will appear on the local institute program for the first time. She is at present primary supervisor in the Madison public schools and also has charge of the Normal training school department of Earlham College at Richmond.

Her work will be more along a practical rather than a theoretical line. She will give illustrations of a model school before the teachers. It is expected that school children will be furnished from the Rushville public schools to be used as examples both in pointing out the model as well as the opposite.
